Nikon SB-800 (2003-2008) © 2006 KenRockwell.com Nikon SB-800. This free website's biggest source of support is when you use these links, especially this link to the SB-800 at eBay; (see How to Win at eBay), when you get anything. Thank you! Ken. Nikon Flashes Compared. How to Use Wireless Flash Control. Introduction The SB-800 was announced 22 July 2003. It was Nikon's best flash until the complex SB-900 arrived in 2008. The SB-800 works with every Nikon camera made for the past 40 years. It's the only flash, along with the almost identical SB-600, that works properly with the D70 and the new i-TTL exposure system. I have a page comparing the SB-600 and SB-800 here. Read here about how to use it remotely, which it does for free with the built-in slave. The SB-800 flash includes colored filters to match tungsten and fluorescent light. This is very important for use indoors. Currently I Velcro gels to my SB-28DX to match the ambient light. Most people are not familiar with this trick. This is an important feature since you need to match the flash to the ambient light for fill. If you already know how to gel your flash it's no big deal, but for most people this will be a big help. For my current flash I go to a theatrical lighting supply store to buy filter material made by people like Rosco in huge sheets for $5 each and Velcro it to my flash. You then set the camera's white balance to match the ambient light and everything looks much better, instead of having fill and ambient light with different colors. The SB-800 adds a reverse flash guide number mode for flash where you set the aperture and the flash sets the level automatically based on distance. This is like the flashmatic modes of the 1950s, backwards. Power The SB-800 has a rated GN of 125' at ISO 100 with the zoom head set to 35mm. At full manual power it has a recycle time of 6 seconds (alkaline) or 4 seconds (Ni-MH) and provides 130 shots (alkaline) or 150 shots (Ni-MH.) Size: 2.8 x 5.0 x 3.6" (71 x 127 x 92mm), rated. Weight: 12.3 oz. (350g), empty. Nikon Product Number: 4801, in catalog as of spring 2008. More tech data is here and here. Here's a promo piece on how to use some of the features. I have a page comparing the SB-600 and SB-800 here. If you just need a master commander to use on-camera for controlling remote flashes then get the new Nikon SU-800. PLUG I support my growing family through this website. Ken Price Range Sponsored Advertisements: The Nikon SB-800 Speedlight is a professional grade camera flash usable with all Nikon cameras. The SB-800 is designed for photographers who seek maximum flexibility adding light to an image and offers more control modes, output power, settings & amenities than lesser units. With abundant on camera feature set and significant off camera capabilities as well, it's well regarded as one of the best flash models Nikon (or anyone) has produced. Flashtube output is channeled through a multi-position auto zoom head. A flip down extra wide angle diffuser is built-in to the unit along with a built-in bounce card; the bounce card even has a quick reference guide to control buttons printed on the back. A large capacitor bank provides a deep reservoir of power enabling very high output brightness/range (or more flashes with instant recycle time at lower output levels). The SB-800 uses 4 AA batteries and the battery door can be swapped with a Nikon SD-800 battery pack that holds a 5th AA battery for faster recycling times. For even faster recycling times, external power can be supplied through a power port on the front of the SB-800. TTL 'Through The Lens' flash metering modes include i-TTL metering for the D2H and later cameras, D-TTL for early digital cameras, and regular TTL for Nikon autofocus film cameras. Non-TTL 'Auto' flash modes are also available making use of a flash sensor on the SB-800 to adjust flash output during exposures. Other modes included Full Manual output and Repeating Stroboscopic for special effect shots. A Modeling Light button fires a continuous stroboscopic burst while held so the photographer can see where shadows will fall while composing. A large back=lit display screen provides vital information at a glance, showing comprehensive setting, range, and status data in great detail. The SB-800 can serve as a 'Commander' unit for Nikon's wireless Creative Lighting System (CLS). CLS allows creative wireless i-TTL flash freedom with up to three groups of compatible flashes. The new Wide-Area AF-Assist Illuminator can provide your camera more autofocus assistance in low lighting conditions than previous models. A new metal mounting foot is more durable than plastic feet used on other models. Side TTL out and side PC out ports make corded multi flash set up possible. Basic operation of the unit is quite simple in TTL modes; to fully master and get the most out Nikon's industry leading flash system, reading the detailed and informative instruction manual is highly recommended.
